STATE SENATORS NEXT VISITORS

Large Party of Pennsylvania State Senators will arrive here Wednesday for Two Day Tour of the Battlefield.

Gettysburg's next party of distinguished guests will be Pennsylvania's State Senators who are scheduled to come here on Wednesday for a two days' tour of the battlefield. The legislators who were here several weeks ago were practically all members of the House of Representatives and now the Senators, hearing of the success of the trip of the lower house, have decided to duplicate the outing.

Senator William A. Martin will conduct the party here and expects to bring about sixty members of the Senate together with their wives and friends. The lawmakers will arrive at 1:45 on the regular Reading afternoon train and will stop at the Eagle during their sojourn here. The customary trips over the battlefield will be made with Captain James T. Long delivering lectures at the more important points.

For the evening Senator Martin has arranged no special program but the Senators will be invited to spend some time at the college and the balance of their time will be taken care of. The visitors will leave Thursday.

SCHOOL CODE AND GOOD ROADS

The State Legislature will in all probability dispose of the School Code this week, and if the hopes of the men in charge of the big bill are realized, it will be on the desk of Governor Tener by Saturday.

The advocates of the code are confident that it will pass. Governor Tener will sign it as soon as it can be gone over.

Road building legislation will also occupy attention of the House during the week, as the Sprout Main Highway bill is hooked to be acted upon by the committee on Public Roads, and it will likely be reported out with addition of a number of routes.

The joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution, to permit the state to borrow $50,000,000 for construction of highways, will be in the House this week and bids fair to be a subject of extended discussion. A considerable element is opposed to this plan for highway building, holding that roads should be built out of current revenue, but the measure will have strong support.

Governor Tener has gone on record in favor of a bond issue, his speech before the Central Pennsylvania Bankers, Harrisburg, on February 22, being a hearty endorsement of that plan. The Governor favors the issuance of the bonds as they are needed to carry out the road building program, which will cover a number of years.

Should this joint resolution pass the present Legislature it will be laid before the General Assembly of 1913 and if passed at that time will be presented to the people at the election in November of that year.

TOLD DR. STECK THAT HE WOULD COMMIT SUICIDE

Frank Reeser, the wealthy 60 year old president of the York Cotton Company, who committed suicide by drowning Saturday, had a few days ago confided to his pastor, Rev. A. R. Steck, of Union Lutheran Church, that he had an irresistible impulse to take his life. His physician had advised the family to keep watch upon him. It is stated that the business troubles over which he brooded were largely imaginary. The place where Reeser drowned himself was an old swimming hole, with a gruesome record of several accidental drownings and at least one other suicide.

TO COUNT EVERY PIECE OF MAIL

Hard Work ahead for Employees of the Gettysburg Post Office. Month of May will See Mail Counted and Employees Timed.

By an order received this morning at the local post office from Postmaster General Hitchcock work is mapped out for the month of May which will keep Postmaster Beales and his force hard at it for the entire month. The task ordered is more severe than any yet imposed and the clerks are looking forward with little pleasure to the opening of the coming month. Every piece of mail which goes through the local office must be counted and the various kinds of mail are divided into about twenty subdivisions for which a separate count must be made. In addition to this the actual time consumed in handling the mail must be kept and a calculation made as to the number of pieces handled a minute.

The average number of handlings which each piece receives must also be given and records kept separately for incoming and outgoing mail. Separate records are also asked for account being kept both of the number of pieces collected and of the number carried. The rural mail carriers must perform the same service and in addition keep an accurate account of the weight of their mail.

The task imposed by the head of the department means that Gettysburg's postal force will have to work just about three times as hard as at present and they do not relish the prospect of the tedious job imposed upon them. The work of getting the statistics will be wide-spread and thousands of post offices have already received the same order or will get it in a few days.

Each institution has two teams, the affirmative team debating at home and the negative team debating away from home. Gettysburg's affirmative team consists of C. M. Davis and E. J. Bowman. MOTORCYCLIST KILLED

Two Machines Collide in Philadelphia With Fatal Results.
Philadelphia, April 24.—Trying to avoid a rough strip of Belgian blocks at Broad and Race streets, Charles R. Bell, a young motor cyclist out for a Sunday ride, collided with another motor cyclist, John Moxey, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, with the result that Bell was almost instantly killed. Moxey was seriously injured.

When the two heavy machines crashed into each other Bell shot over his handle bars with the force of a steel projectile and struck the asphalt on his head. Moxey and his machine were crushed to the street by the weight of Bell's machine.

FASTS FOR 26 DAYS

Seaford, Del., April 24.—While loading lumber a month ago, William T. Marvel, of this town, stuck a small splinter into his thumb.

The accident happened on a Friday, and Sunday afternoon the pain was so excruciating that a doctor was summoned, and upon his arrival lockjaw had developed.

Everything was done to relieve him, but without avail. Fasting was ordered and Marvel was kept alive for twenty-six days by hypodermic injections of morphine.

Marvel has now recovered and he shows no ill effects from his fast and attack of tetanus.

MOTHER ATTEMPTS TO SMASH SON'S AIRSHIP

She Fears He Will be Injured or Killed.

Seaford, Del., April 24.—Fearing that her son might be injured, or possibly killed, in the trial trip of an aeroplane constructed by himself and a friend, Mrs. Luella G. Boyce, mother of Lancel Boyce, went to the shop where the machine was being assembled and threatened to smash it.

Mrs. Boyce was repulsed by her son, who had barricaded the door and refused to allow her to enter.

At a cost of $1000, Lancel Boyce and Arnold Greenbaum constructed the machine. The mother knew nothing about the activity of the two eighteen-year-old youths until she read an account of the craft in a paper. Then she announced her intention to her son and started for the factory.

Young Boyce took a short cut across the town and reached the place ahead of his mother. He locked the door and refused to allow her to enter.

Mrs. Boyce is still determined that her son shall not make an air trip, and promises to thwart his plans. She says she does not want her son to become a "high flyer."

FIND COPPER VEIN

Deposit Discovered in Monticello, N. Y., While Building a Sewer.
Monticello, N. Y., April 24.—A large and supposed valuable vein of copper was discovered in the center of this village.

The discovery was made by the C. S. Lambie company, which is putting in a sewer system for the village. The copper was found at a depth of fourteen feet and the vein runs directly under the fine residence of County Judge W. L. Thornton.

Local experts pronounce it a fine quality and a sample has been sent to New York city for analysis. The older residents of Monticello believe the find will lead to a copper deposit, the location of which has been lost for nearly a century.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 24.—A check, inclosed in a bottle and thrown into the sea from a vessel off the coast of the Carolinas by a Pittsburger on March 18, just to see if it would turn up again, was received by the Lincoln bank last week. The check was for $1, and was made out to "Bever."

Pearl Etheridge, an eleven-year-old girl, of Kitty Hawk, N. C., found the bottle near Kill Devil's Hill, on the seacoast, April 12, and sent the check to the bank, and the money was forwarded to her.

DENIED PARDON FOR OLD CRIME

Slayer Fugitive of 1897 Must Serve His Term.

PLEA PARTLY REJECTED

Governor of Georgia Ignores Sentiment as Misplaced—Prisoner Served as Chief of Police at Danville, Va.

Atlanta, Ga., April 24.—Governor Joseph M. Brown denied the pardon petition of Thomas E. Stripling, who in 1897 killed William Cornett in Harris county because of insulting advances to his wife and sister, and who was convicted of this crime and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Stripling made his escape, fled to another state, and by sobriety and strict attention to duty became chief of police of Danville, Va., holding that position until less than two months ago, when he was recognized and returned to Georgia.

Stripling is at present confined in the jail at Columbus, using the jailer's office as a cell. Broken in health, suffering from tuberculosis, he is in no condition for hard work on the road and will be sent to the state prison farm, where some kind of light work will be given him.

In denying the petition, Governor Brown reversed the action of the prison commission, which unanimously recommended the pardon, and acted in direct opposition to public sentiment, hundreds of petitions and letters from Georgia and Virginia and other points having been submitted to the governor and the prison commission, pleading for the pardon of the man who by fourteen years of right living had shown the uprightness of his life and had earned, in their opinion, a clean slate from the state.

No Unwritten Law.

Sentiment, however, played no part in the decision of the governor. He held that only law and the constitution should govern an executive in reaching an opinion in this case.

"One can scarcely imagine an assassination characterized by more complete absence of the elements of courageous manhood in him who committed it," said the governor.

The plea of the "unwritten law" is disposed of by Governor Brown with the statement that "the constitution of Georgia does not recognize the unwritten law."

"I will here add," he said, "that to the thoughtful citizen, one of the most dangerous evils menacing our institutions is lawlessness. The mob executing in wild disorder its victims, and the individual wreaking his own revenge for wrongs real or imaginary, the man of interest treating with contempt the laws of the land and trusting to gold or influence for safety, are striking manifestations of the spirit of lawlessness."

FIND NEGRO'S HEAD IN SACK

Collector Takes It From Doctor's Office In Mistake For Laundry.
Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 24.—The discovery of a negro's head in what was supposed to be a package of wash at the Diamond City laundry here caused a panic among the girls. The package was sent by mistake.

Miss Nellie Morris was opening bundles. Taking the paper from one, she shook out a human head. With a shriek she fell into a swoon. The girls rushed to her, saw the head, and with a chorus of cries seized the unconscious girl and dashed out of the room crying that a murder had been committed.

Manager Davis found that the package came from White Haven. The collector explained on the telephone that he had taken it from a physician's office in mistake for laundry. The head was returned to the physician.

VANDALS POISON COWS

Following Dog Slaughter, They Grow More Dangerous.
Altoona, Pa., April 24.—Following a season of dog poisoning, some maliciously inclined person has taken to poisoning cows in Pleasant Valley, and farmers greatly fear their herds will be decimated.

Two good milkers owned by Chris Benz died and others show symptoms of the drug. A close watch is being maintained to prevent further killings and lay the poisoner by the heels.

Hundreds Disfranchised.

Louis, Ky., April 24.—Hundreds of persons are to be disfranchised as a result of an investigation into vote buying in Lawrence county by the grand jury. The inquiry was ordered by Circuit Judge Hannah, who instructed the grand jury to make a complete and thorough investigation. This is the tenth county in Kentucky in which such an investigation has been ordered in the last month.

Heavy ties were piled on the New York Central tracks near Lincoln Park, N. Y., in an attempt to wreck the Continental Limited.

A Titusville (Pa.) ordinance provides that upon the complaint of any five citizens any dog running at large must be impounded and shot.

Crawling upon the tracks in the path of a "lokie" at the Brighton washery near the main road at Gilberton, Pa., four-year-old Michael Macie crushed his right leg and arm so badly that they had to be amputated.

A passenger train on the Kowler railroad plunged to destruction in a rocky gorge 250 feet deep through the collapse of the Blasuwkrantz bridge, thirteen miles from Grahamstown, in South Africa. Twenty-one passengers were carried down with the coaches and killed. Their bodies were torn to pieces.

A Hungarian woman, who could not speak English, walked into the post-office at Dubois, Pa., with a sackful of greenbacks, which she insisted on depositing in the postal savings bank. With the assistance of the postmaster and his daughter $500, bills of all denominations, were sorted and counted. A postal bank cannot accept more than $100 from a single depositor in one month. When advised of this the woman seemed to be deeply chagrined.

FIND WOMAN'S BODY; MURDER IS SUSPECTED

Disappeared From Annapolis, Md., on April 5.

Annapolis, Md., April 24.—The body of Mrs. Dora White, who, with her sister, Miss Alice Shores, disappeared from here on April 5 last, was found floating in Spa creek.

The upper part of the body was badly bruised, and a coroner's jury, of which Mayor Strange is foreman, would not render a verdict, but adjourned until Tuesday to permit of a report by the county physician as to whether the bruises were received before or after Mrs. White fell or was thrown into the water.

The creek has been persistently searched since the woman's disappearance, but, aside from the finding of Miss Shores' hat in the water near a bridge where they were last seen, no trace of them was found until Sunday.

WHEN WE WERE KIDS.

How these warm days remind us
Of the time when we were kids—
Barefooted, freckled, hollers!
And as spry as katydids!

My, didn't we raise a cloud of dust
When we played in the street!
And when we got those mud pies made
You bet we all looked sweet!

We got bunged by big bumblebees.
Ate ants and swelled up fat.
We tied the cat to Towser's tail
And got well licked for that.

And cherries! Didn't we hook a lot?
Green apples—oh, what pain!
We held our little tummies tight
And yelled with might and main.

My, didn't we have a mouth for pie
And cake and "lases bread"
And play at circus every night
When we were put to bed!

Yes, preacher, you look dignified
In that white tie and coat,
But don't forget that summer day
When you stole Billy's goat!

And quick got butt'd in the creek,
Splashed clear in overhead,
And then got smacked for bein' mean
And had to go to bed.

And you, great judge upon the bench,
My golly, you look stern!
But you're the kid that put the pond
In gran'ma's butter churn.

How oft we laid on mother's knee
And got our pants well dusted!
But if we couldn't have had that fun
We surely would have busted.

C. M. BARNITZ.

PREVENTION OF SUMMER ILLS.

The summer ailments of adult fowls are mostly digestive disorders and may be mainly avoided by simple prevention. They are mostly caused by filth, vermin, bad feed, ill feeding, lack of pure drink and heat exposure. Hot weather is the great microbe and bug breeder. Heated filth is a hotbed of deadly disease. Therefore clean the henhouse and yards early, remove all dirty litter, droppings, scrapings of floors and yards to the field or garden, spray the whole outfit with lime and make all things new.

Old time time is good for humans and for hens. It brightens and gives a solar plexus to smiles, bacteria and to bugs; therefore let more humans join the Limekiln club, wear fewer bugs and live longer. Treat fowls individually for lice, furnish a bath where they may dust for crawlers and occasionally sprinkle oak wood ashes in the mash to kill the worms that cause intestinal troubles.

Pure water kept cool by shade is extremely necessary and when colored often with venetian red helps to preserve hen health and prevent cholera and kindred complaints, as the lime, magnesia and iron of the red are very beneficial.

Hens should be kept from excessive fat and heating food, therefore corn should be fed sparingly. Wheat and oats are the summer grains. Moist mash should be fed often, and greens are an absolute necessity. Grit and charcoal should be kept before the flock, and natural or artificial shade should be provided.

Save your hens from excessive heat by day and night, for heat prostration brings many ills to hen and men.

If possible have free range. Its cool shade, tender herbage, natural animal food, pleasant exercise, pure air and clean environment are the sine qua non for success.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Rats in a poultry house are sure sign of bughouse in this age, when cement floors may be laid quick and cheap. You wish to know the proportions for a henhouse floor? First coat, two parts sharp sand, four parts clean gravel, one part cement. Second coat, half sharp sand, half cement, finished smooth.

When you are uncertain as to the age of an egg do not sell it. Eggs often turn up after being buried in the litter for weeks. When sold a good customer will quickly turn down the seller.

The successful poultryman is a close observer. There are so many little straws that show which way the wind blows, and the man who throws down feed, fills the water vessel and doesn't see his hens for the rest of the day, can't make it pay. To avoid trouble always "stop, look and listen."

Other states are just beginning to discover the vast extent of the rot and spot business. The finger for awhile was pointed at Pennsylvania. New York and other states are now copying her methods of warfare and borrowing her inspectors. Pennsylvania's drastic law, the conscientious work of her inspectors and the severe sentences given these poison vendors should be imitated everywhere.

In packing eggs use a material that keeps the eggs apart. Sawdust and buckwheat hulls are too heavy and the eggs shake all together. Excelsior or soft paper wrapped round each egg separately is O. K.

There were 836,848 hogs afflicted with tuberculosis the past year which were killed by government inspectors. Millions of chickens died with it.

It isn't very pleasant to find the hen breaking a few of those high priced eggs every day. But don't swear about it. A roomier nest or a lighter hen will stop the trouble.

One hundred and thirty-five turkeys, weighing 1,620 pounds, were raised and sold by a Loyalsock (Pa.) farmer at the Williamsport market for 30 cents per pound.

It is wise to remember that young turkeys quickly succumb to rheumatism and roup if they sleep in damp quarters. Hard floors give them swollen joints. A roomy shed with open front and clean dry floor is splendid in rainy weather.

WHEN THE PIGS COME.

Proper Treatment of Sow and Litter at Farrowing Time.

Two weeks before the pigs are expected the sow should be placed in a farrowing pen connected with a dry yard large enough to allow her to exercise. Her bowels should be kept loose. She should have dry, sunny shelter, free from drafts. The sow should be petted, so that she will like to have her feeder handle her.

Give the sow all the water she wants for the first twenty-four hours after the pigs are born, but no grain.

The head of the Berkshire boar shown herewith approaches the ideal as accepted by breeders. The tendency in recent years has been to produce an extremely pug nosed animal, and, commenting on this, a Berkshire breeder said: "My experience is that a hog with this kind of nose is not as thrifty or as growthy as any of the other pigs in the herd that have reasonably good heads. A good head, as is described in the standard of excellence, is wide, broad between the eyes and ears, with nicely dished face. Now, nicely dished does not mean a pug nose, with the lower jaw longer than the upper, or one that snuffles or snuffles in the least. It is a head that is in balance with the rest of the animal and in proportion in every way."

Take the chill off the water in cold weather. For three or four days after the first twenty-four hours give plenty of water, but feed grain and milk sparingly. Then slowly increase until, when the pigs are three weeks old, the sow is having all the feed she will consume. Give the pigs exercise and sunshine from birth, but do not allow them to get damp nor to be exposed to the wind.

When the sow is given a warm, rich slop or other milk producing feeds just after her pigs are born a strong milk flow is forced. The newborn pigs get too much and have diarrhea, which often kills them.

Watch the sow and pigs and slowly increase her food as fast as the pigs can take more milk. At the end of two weeks after farrowing she should be given all the milk producing feeds she will eat. Pasture, skim milk, tankage, shorts, wheat, gluten feed and the hay from alfalfa, clover, peas and peanuts are among the best milk producing feeds.

Corn and barley in moderate quantities are good, but must be fed with large quantities of the milk yielding feeds. An excess of either of these grains is certain to bring on thrumps, one of the most fatal of the diseases of young pigs. Like all growing animals, the pigs must have hours of exercise every day.

Pigs will begin to nibble at feed when they are about three weeks old. At this age they should be given a little milk in a trough separate from the mother. After they get to drinking the milk freely add a little soaked whole grain—barley, wheat, peas, milo or corn. Do not give more than they will eat up before one time, and clean the trough well before each feeding.

Pigs should not be weaned until they are at least eight weeks old, and if the sow is not to have a second litter, or if there is time enough in case she is, it is better to let the pigs suckle until they are ten or twelve weeks old.—Professor H. M. Cottrell in Kansas Farmer.

About Cottonseed Meal.

It has been found by experiment that young animals and especially pigs cannot survive long upon cottonseed meal and that when fed to them for any length of time it becomes fatal. Hunt of the Pennsylvania station reports the death of two calves out of three from feeding a ration of one pound of cottonseed meal with sixteen pounds of skim milk. Emery of the North Carolina station reports the death of two calves following the use of one-fourth to one-half pound of cottonseed meal daily with skim milk. So far as investigations go they indicate very strongly that cottonseed meal should not be fed to young animals.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Oats and Peas as a Soiling Crop.

Perhaps as good a crop as we could suggest for soiling purposes during the months of July and August would be to sow peas and oats, says Hoard's Dairyman. When this crop is sowed the 15th of April it will be ready to use by the 1st of July. Two weeks later the second sowing can be made, and so on until enough has been sowed to carry the herd through the months of July and August. It is customary to sow one and one-half bushels of oats and one-half bushels of peas per acre. One-eighth of an acre sown at a time would, under favorable conditions, furnish sufficient forage for three cows.

ARMISTICE ENDS MEXICAN WAR

Federal and Insurrecto Leaders Sign Document.

TO ARRANGE PEACE TERMS

General Amnesty to Be Granted to All Men in Madero's Army and Reforms to Be Carried Out by Government.

El Paso, Tex., April 24.—The armistice between the insurrectos and the federals has been extended for another five days.

The time dates from Sunday afternoon at 1:30, when Francisco I. Madero put his signature to the terms. Prior to that General Navarro, commanding the federal troops in Juarez, had already signed the document.

The agreement provides that there will be no fighting during the term of the armistice and that each side will make no further steps to reinforce or construct fortifications while its terms are in operation.

The insurrectos are to be given permission to take food for themselves and horses, also clothing, from El Paso or Juarez without molestation. These supplies are to be passed over the international bridges between El Paso and Juarez without payment of duty to the federal officials of Mexico. The Mexican officials are to have a right to search the supplies for arms or ammunition, but agree not to molest anything that is not ammunition of arms.

The peace negotiations are to be carried on from El Paso. Dr. Gomez, in charge of the Washington agency of the insurrectos, is expected in El Paso. The Madero family is now in El Paso, and Messrs. Oscar Braniff and Esquivel Oregon, congressmen from Mexico City, have been in El Paso for several days, representing President Diaz. The senior Madero, father of the rebel chief, and Rafael Hernandez are close friends of Minister of Finance Limantour.

Madero Signs Agreement.

Messrs. Braniff and Oregon obtained the signature of General Navarro to the agreement and, accompanying Gonzales Garza, secretary general of the insurrectos, in charge of the El Paso junta, and Francisco I. Madero, Sr., father of the insurrecto chief, they made a visit to Madero's headquarters in a little adobe hut on the banks of the Rio Grande very near the monument marking the boundary line of New Mexico, Mexico and Texas. After a short discussion Madero signed the articles of agreement and the peace party returned to Juarez and El Paso.

It is understood that the peace terms will include the pledge on the part of the Mexican cabinet that all reforms recommended by President Diaz in his last message will be carried out in good faith and that general amnesty will be granted to all men in the army who will go to their homes in peace.

General Diaz was accused in his message of "stealing the thunder of Madero," and he advocated about all that the insurrectos insist upon getting from the government. Madero's position in the past has been that the insurrectos could no more trust Diaz now than in the past to carry out the promises of reform and that the insurrectos would not cease fighting as long as Diaz remained in office.

It is said that one of the conditions of the disarmament of the insurrectos will be that they be allowed to retain their arms; that it is not to be a surrender, but merely a disarmament. Madero is to make the men a speech, a farewell address, and they are all to get up and ride off to their work and their homes, to await the return of the prosperity that all confidently expect is to come to Mexico following the agreement that will undoubtedly be reached within the next few days.

BLINDED BY STOVE POLISH

Ignition of Blacking Almost Kills a Woman.

Pottsville, Pa., April 24.—Mrs. Irvin Eisenhauer, of this place, was injured in her kitchen and rendered blind by an unusual explosion.

She was blacking the stove when the polish ignited. In the accompanying flash both eyes were filled with the burning polish, and her face and head were splashed with it. She is in a serious condition.

POLICE HIDE SON'S SLAYER, SHE SAYS

Mother Will Sue Easton, Md., If Murderer is Not Arraigned.

Seaford, Del., April 24.—Charges that the police of Easton, Md., are shielding the persons who attacked her son, William E. Warrington, who afterward was found dead in a cell in the police station, have been made by Mrs. John Newell, mother of the victim.

In her charges Mrs. Newell threatens to bring civil action against the police of Easton to clear up the death of her son, unless criminal proceedings are instituted at once against the police.

Following the exhuming of the body last week, when it was shown that Warrington died of a fractured skull, received in a mysterious manner, Mrs. Newell has made the charge that her son was murdered, either before or after he was placed in a cell, and that the Easton police knew the murdered and are keeping him concealed.

A traveling man from Easton was in Seaford and declared that politics entered into the death of Warrington and that no prosecution would follow. He admitted that the civil action might cause a change and that politicians, in order to protect themselves, would insist on the murderer being revealed and prosecuted criminally.

FRENCH TO MARCH ON FEZ

Paris, April 24.—The situation in Morocco resulting from the rebellion against Sultan Mulay Haddi has led to talk of French intervention by sending an army to Fez. The French government, however, has not reached any decision.

For the moment France merely will re-enforce her troops in the Chaouia district. The French government adheres strictly to the Algeiras conference agreement.

UNION HEAD HELD AS DYNAMITER

More Evidence Found Against the Prisoners.

ARE BEING RUSHED WEST

Explosives Discovered in Barn in What is Said to Be Nation Wide Plot to Destroy Property.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 24.—Experts under the direction of Detective William J. Burns drilled the safe of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, but they failed to get evidence to back up their charges against the secretary of the organization, John J. McNamara, accused as the head of the dynamiters who destroyed the Los Angeles Times building, causing the death of twenty-one persons.

Meanwhile McNamara, in the custody of Sergeant James Hisscock, of Los Angeles, and several of Burns' detectives, is on the way to California, spirited away in spite of desperate efforts of his friends to locate him and prevent his removal.

Rally to Defense.

Having failed to stop the drilling of the safe of their organization, union leaders are trying every means to find out where McNamara now is.

They are receiving from union leaders in all parts of the country telegrams assuring them of belief in the innocence of the organization and of McNamara, and of their loyal support in the great battle that is certain to come.

The other two prisoners who were arrested in Detroit by the Burns agency men, James W. McNamara, of Cincinnati, alias J. B. Bryce, and Orrie McManigal, of Chicago, charged with being the pair who actually did the dynamiting under the distant supervision of Secretary McNamara, are on a fast train for Los Angeles, in charge of two Los Angeles detectives, and there is no mystery about their transfer.

There is no doubt in the minds of the detectives and police officers that J. J. McNamara is the head of the dynamiting organization that has blown up more than 100 buildings in the past three years. They are satisfied that McNamara is not only the head of the criminal organization, but that he was its inspiration and has directed all its movements, purchasing the dynamite to be used in explosions, the clocks by which the dynamite was exploded and deciding where and when the explosion should occur.

The evidence at hand shows conclusively that the movement was not aimed specially at opponents of the international union, of which McNamara was an officer. Such confinement of acts of violence would have attracted attention to the bridge and structural workers alone, and the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building, the wrecking of houses on which non-union carpenters were employed and on structures on which non-union men of other trades were employed in other places was a part of the system to distract attention from the ironworkers as the prime movers in the conspiracy against life and property.

The finding of dynamite in large quantities in the actual possession of McNamara, both in an old stable that he had rented and in the basement of the American Central Life building, in which he had stored a box of the explosive after having gotten the consent of the custodian, is regarded as conclusive evidence.

Accuses Detectives.

President F. M. Ryan, of the International Structural Iron Workers, insists that the sixty-four sticks of dynamite, 200 feet of fuse, 500 caps and the clocks found in the storeroom of the association building, were never put there by McNamara or by anybody for him, but that they were put there by detectives in an effort to fasten evidence on McNamara.

Of all the developments on the line of evidence the most striking is the statement made by T. H. Jones, who owns the barn where Burns' men on Saturday found seventeen sticks of dynamite and two quarts of nitroglycerin. Jones says that McNamara himself rented the barn from him in January for $25 a month, and that he had seen McNamara and others visiting the barn and carrying suitcases with them.

A. V. Redding Agent

IN BLACK AND WHITE

By EVERETT P. CLARKE
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"Frank," said Evelyn to me one evening when I went to see her—Evelyn and I were engaged to be married in about a month—"I'm all upset about Mildred."

"What's the matter with Mildred?" I asked.

"Well, I don't see what you are going to do about it."

"There's one thing I could do, only you'd object. Ed is the most vacillating fellow about girls. If some girl should make up her mind to take him away from Mildred she wouldn't have any trouble doing it, and when she'd done it Mildred would not take him back."

"I see. You want to help Mildred out by taking Ed away from her. Go ahead. Anything goes (ill after we are married, then you'll have to mind home business and let your friends alone."

Evelyn gave me a hearty smack and assured me there would be no trouble in the matter. She only wished to show Mildred what a fickle fellow Ed was.

A week passed during which I believe Evelyn commenced her demonstration of Ed's fickleness. Then we met at a ball. Ed and Evelyn were dancing together when I happened to see Mildred standing alone. Of course we two being engaged and our fancies being occupied with each other, I naturally joined Mildred. We both made light of what by this time was apparent between Ed and Evelyn just as though we had perfect confidence and didn't fear anything. For my part, since Evelyn had told me just what she was going to do and her reason for doing it, I wasn't much worried. Mildred didn't seem any more worried than I. In fact, she seemed to be very well satisfied to have me with her. I was modest enough to tell her that I was doubtless a very poor substitute for her lover, but she said I needn't concern myself about that, for no girl wished for one man's attention all the time.

"Besides," she added, looking at me archly, "who knows but that if you'd have come along before Ed we might have made a match."

This was pretty frank, but I always liked persons who blurt things out and went on jokingly about the matter till the next dance came round, and we danced it together. After that Evelyn joined me. I asked her how she was getting on with Ed, and she said "pretty well." When we left the ball together and Ed and Mildred passed us I saw Evelyn give him a very meaningful smile.

A few days later I said to her that since we were going to be married within a few weeks I thought she had better draw her good offices with regard to her friend Mildred to a close. She said that she wished to get Ed down in black and white, so that she might prove his faithfulness to Mildred.

One day I received word from Mildred, saying that she would like me to come and see her. I went reluctantly thinking that she was jealous of Evelyn and wished me to discuss the affair with her. This, of course, I didn't wish to do, understanding Evelyn's object. I found Mildred much more calm than I had expected. She didn't seem disturbed at all. She asked me if I had observed what was going on between Ed and Evelyn. I told her I had, but it hadn't troubled me.

The upshot of the matter was that I was obliged to tell her that I knew Evelyn was flirting with Ed for a purpose. When I had told her this much it was only a question of time as to my telling her what that purpose was.

"If," I concluded, "Evelyn can draw Ed away from you, proving that he is not to be relied on, I really think she will have done you a great favor."

"I agree with you," she replied, very much to my surprise, for few girls would look upon such an act as friendly. "When," she asked, "am I to know the result?"

I decided that since our confidence had gone so far I had better tell her the whole thing. "When Evelyn gets Ed down in black and white," was my reply.

"What do you mean?" I asked, starting.

"Here is a letter Evelyn wrote to Ed. Ed is a careless, shiftless sort of a fellow and by mistake put it in an envelope instead of one he had written me—either this or he made the mistake on purpose. Read it."

She handed me the letter, and I read it with astonishment. It gave him the details of a plan by which she proposed to get rid of me and marry him. She had already begun her scheme in certain acts mentioned in the letter. This confirmed me in a knowledge that she was deceiving me and not him.

"Mildred," I asked presently, "are you crushed?"

"I'm not even stung."

"They have swapped us for each other. Suppose we do the same."

The next day the breaking off of my engagement with Evelyn was announced. A week later the breaking of the engagement of Ed and Mildred was made known, and four months later Mildred and I were married.

Ed and Evelyn had a quarrel and ceased to speak to each other. And neither of them speak to me or my wife.

SAGE TEA WILL DARKEN THE HAIR

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderfully beneficial effect. Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time, tiresome methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing sage in the proper strength, with the addition of sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

THE WINNING OF NELLIE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

Jacob Briff was a farmer, a dairyman and a cattle raiser, and he was worth $40,000. He kept eight or ten men the year round, and he was a good man to work for. His family consisted of only wife and daughter, the latter being named Nellie.

Jacob Briff was not a boaster in a general way. There was only one particular thing he boasted of, and that was that he had never been taken in and done for by a sharper. He had no sympathy for a man who had. Not that he was always bound to get the best of a bargain, but that he wanted to protect himself.

When Nellie Briff was nineteen years old along came a college chap seeking employment for the summer. He was so superior to the average farm hand that he was taken into the house to lodge. The father and mother saw the college chap and their daughter falling in love and for a time had little to say. The day came, however, when Jacob said:

"Look here, Mary, that young man is going to ask us for Nellie pretty soon."

"Yes, I think so."

Two weeks later the young man approached the father in the usual way and put the question in the usual way, and the answer was:

"I'm not saying yes or no just now. I'll wait a week."

The next day but one Mr. Williams was told to take a certain horse to town and effect a trade. What was wanted was a heavier horse for the farm work. The animal he took was perfectly sound in wind and limb, though nothing was said about that. He was simply cautioned as to the weight and strength of the other.

"Is it a test?" asked the wife of her husband when the young man had gone his way.

"Aye, Mary, I'm no horse trader, but I do contend that the man who gets the worst in a horse trade will get the worst in everything else. Williams gets or loses Nellie on this."

"But he has never traded horses before, and he isn't used to the way that men lie and deceive."

"But it's his native wit and keenness I'm testing. I'm looking for him to get cheated a little, but not too much."

Five hours later Williams came back on the horse he had traded for. His look told of exultation. Jacob Briff received the end of the halter from him and began a thorough lookover.

At the end of twenty minutes he said: "There are wind galls, there are spavins, there is a quarter crack, the horse is blind in the left eye, and he has a touch of the heaves."

"Yes, but the other had botts, poll evil and was going blind in both eyes. He was hip locked to boot."

"Who told you so?"

"Why, the fellow I traded with."

"Humph! Sound as a bell, Mr. Williams, you can't have Nellie."

"Because I've been cheated in a horse trade?"

"Aye, it was a test. You haven't got the sharpness to hold your own. You'll have to go."

"But, Mr. Briff, you have been cheated."

"Tell me when."

"Then you will be. No man is so sharp that he can't be taken in."

"Eh? Eh? Well, you wait till it happens and then come back for Nellie, providing she is ready to wait a hundred years. Aye, and you shall have half of what I'm worth to boot. We'll talk no more now. Have one of the men take this wreck out and shoot it. I'm $250 out of pocket."

Mrs. Briff shed tears when she heard the ultimatum. Miss Nellie was going to, but she didn't. After a talk with her lover she even smiled.

Six weeks passed away, and then a stranger came. He expressed his conviction that there was a box of silver buried on the farm.

It was the only thing in the world that would have excited the farmer. Treasure—and on his farm! How much?

"At least $600," replied the stranger—"perhaps a thousand." What share would Mr. Briff give him for locating it?

They haggled over this for a whole day. Then, at the solemn hour of midnight, with a divining rod to locate the exact spot, the treasure was unearthed and carried to the barn. It was in a box which was old and moldy. There was $900 in silver half dollars, and the coins were wrapped in brown paper—$50 in a roll.

Jacob Briff had made a clean $400 in one night, and the stranger was satisfied with his end of the business. He had Mr. Briff's $200 in greenbacks.

A week passed away, and Jacob Briff was arrested for passing counterfeit money. Not a coin of that treasure was genuine. And then along came Mr. Williams, and in a most jovial way he announced that he was after a wife and half the farm.

"Did you do it?" asked the farmer.

"I did. I borrowed the counterfeiters from the officers who had seized them and then hired the stranger to play his part."

"But I thought you had no wit?"

"Well, haven't I won Nellie?"

"Aye, you have, and now, as you are to be my son-in-law, you must get me out of this scrape. No decent young man would want to have his father-in-law in jail when the wedding cake was eaten."

REARING CALVES FOR THE DAIRY

A calf for the dairy should be from the best cows and well developed, and at three days old active and bright. As soon as she is born take her out of sight and hearing of the mother, as the mother will be more quiet and the calf will learn to drink more readily than if allowed to suck. Be sure to give her a small feed of the first milking, as this is just what the calf needs to start its digestive organs working properly.

It is well to continue to feed whole milk until the calf is well started, say ten days to two weeks old, then gradually add skim milk with a very little fine middlings until the ration is entirely of skim milk with a grain ration of equal parts by weight of fine middlings, oil meal and corn meal ground very fine.

I have found calf meal to be an excellent substitute for milk and grain, as it takes the place of both. Above all things, do not overfeed the calf, as the calf's stomach until it is two months old is very susceptible to all sorts of derangements from sudden change of diet or overfeeding.

When the calf is about two weeks old keep him where it can nibble at it leisurely, and the youngster will soon learn to eat it, and it will tend to keep the calf's stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition.

Do not be in too great a hurry to turn the calf out to grass in the spring, writes a Kentucky dairyman in Farm Progress. She should not be allowed to eat her fill of grass until she is five or six months old. The first year of a calf's life is the making of the cow.

All the utensils from which the calf eats should be kept as clean as possible, especially the vessel in which milk is provided. Clean feeding pails, clean quarters, plenty of sunlight, fresh air and pasturage as soon as the grass has reached the stage when it will not be injurious to the calf will insure gratifying success.

Calves need water, but while they are given milk they may refuse water, even when thirsty, because it is tasteless and probably cold and they are expecting warm milk to moisten their throats. If shortly before feeding time the calf is offered milk warm water from the same vessel that it is in the habit of drinking milk from it will drink readily. Do not feed milk immediately after the water.

Condition of Breeding Ewe.

Every flock owner of long experience in handling breeding ewes fully realizes that the condition of ewes at mating has a decided influence upon the breeding qualities of both ewes and progeny.

Blanket them warmly and do not allow them to stand uncovered in the wind.

Keep the mud cleaned off the horses' legs and they won't have cracked heels.

Do not nag at your horse. The constant clicking spoils a horse and is a nuisance in a crowd.

The pure bred draft breeding mare will do as much work as a grade, and her colt will be worth much more.

Balking is inexcusable and is always the fault of the driver, not of the horse. It is the direct result of bad management.

Clip the heavy coated horses now, as the hair begins to loosen. Brush them thoroughly every day from head to heels and note the improvement in condition.

It will pay any farmer of good judgment and intelligence to raise high grade or pure bred draft colts, says the Farm Journal. One important requisite is that they should be good feeders.

It isn't a good plan to hang anything up in the stall where horses are kept, even if the nails or hooks are high above them. Colts are particularly apt to be scared if such things drop on them, as they are likely to do, and so be made skittish.

FARMER AND GLAD OF IT.

Mr. Van Wagenen on Seventy-sixth Birthday Sends Cheery Greeting. To the farmer dissatisfied with his groove in life this beautiful optimistic letter, first published in the Country Gentleman, is optimistically recommended:

I wish to extend to my coworkers in agriculture everywhere my seventy-sixth birthday greeting. This anniversary finds me hale and hearty. I do not know that I ever felt less of pain or disease except it be a mild indication of general debility, which surely is to be expected. This desirable condition of health I attribute in great measure to temperate and regular habits of life. All my life as a farmer I have been accustomed to rise at 6 and under all ordinary circumstances to retire at 8. I deem this sort of life conducive to the highest health. I was not born a Samson in strength, but rather, like Paul, with "a thorn in the flesh." We have never had any use for alcohol or tobacco in the family. The only pipe we ever used was the Indian pipe of peace, and this all were encouraged to use freely, as its smoke was offensive to no one, but rather a sweet smelling savor, filling the whole house with its perfume. This custom has made it possible for a large family—never less than seven or eight, sometimes nearly twice that—to live together with very little jar or friction. From many years of experience I can heartily recommend the pipe of peace in all families at the earliest indications of any need of it.

I am sure that the farm is no place for those who have ambitions to become suddenly rich, but as a life of sturdy independence no other equals it. Probably it is true that the farmer could get along without the millionaire, but the rich man could not do without the products of the farm. Still, all classes are needed, and their aim should be to work together for the best good of all. After a lifetime spent on one farm I call myself a rich man, not in money, it is true, but in a life satisfied with an abundance of the things that I really need. What we have beyond this tends to make us poorer. The only desire I have for more than my needs would be for the pleasure it would afford me to give it to those in want.

Fifty-two years ago last November I brought my wife to the home where we now live. We have never known or cared to know any other home. We have been of one mind in thinking that there was as much enjoyment in farm life as we could find anywhere in the world. Nearly all of our neighbors have sought more congenial surroundings, but I regret to say that apparently few have bettered their condition. Not that our life has been all sunshine, yet we have no reason to think there would have been more if we had tried a change. What gives me most pleasure of all to relate is that my dear wife's health is apparently as good as my own, and we are accounting our last days among our best.

JARED VAN WAGENEN.

$100 AN ACRE FROM CABBAGES

Comparatively Little Care is Needed if Grown Under Farmer's Eye.

There is great profit in raising cabbages, but the farmer should raise them himself, says the Orange Judd Farmer. He can have them grown under contract for about $2 a thousand, but under his own care they should not cost him more than $1.

Fall plowed land that has received about ten tons of well rotted manure per acre is best for this crop. As early in the spring as possible the ground is disked once to form a dust mulch for conserving the moisture.

The land is then left untouched until ready for planting, at which time it is disked once each way and harrowed.

There is no definite time for setting out plants, as this is entirely governed by the earliness of the season. The best time is as soon as danger of hard freezing is over.

No special cultivation is needed. Plow at least three times and go over once or twice with a hoe. If the hoeing and plowing are done at the right time very little hard work is required to keep the crop quite free from weeds.

The average price for cabbage on track in recent years has been $8 per ton. An acre will produce at least eighteen tons, which will amount to $144. The cost of producing an acre is about as follows: Rent $5; plowing, harrowing and disking $15; planting $25; cultivation $2; hoeing $1; cutting and hauling $12; manuring, two years, ten tons, $10; total, $37. This leaves an annual profit of over $100 to the acre.

Map out a plan of intelligent farming and then adhere closely to that plan year in and year out unless your neighbor has what proves to be a more successful plan, in which case follow his methods.

There are only about 100,000 pounds of whalebone in the world, and all of this amount is owned by one man, who has control of the market in this product.

The present is a good time to start the campaign against flies by removing from the premises all filth and garbage piles, which are the breeding places of these disgusting and dangerous pests.

AFTER EFFECTS OF THE GRIP

It is fortunate that the Grip epidemic this year is milder in its action than in previous years. This does not mean that it is less dangerous.

The after results of the Grip are apt to be exceedingly serious. Do not take any chances—for the general weakness, and to allay all bronchial irritation after the fever has passed, nothing equals Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the health giving properties of the cod's liver, with the grease eliminated and tonic iron added.

A lady from Long Branch, N. J., writes: "The Grip left me in a nervous, weakened, run down condition. After taking three bottles of Vinol I am better and stronger than I have been for years, and I cheerfully recommend Vinol to all who have been ill and need strength." (Name furnished on request.)

After Grip or any severe illness try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength. People's Drug Store, C. Wm. Beales, proprietor, Gettysburg, Pa.
